WHEREAS, every child is endowed with reason, dignity and worth regardless of social and economic background and efforts should be directed towards his physical and mental nourishment, survival and total development;

WHEREAS, the increasingly growing urban population, coupled with the inequitable distribution of resources and wealth and inadequate social services, have led to the proliferation of street children;

WHEREAS, street children are exposed daily to harmful influences that desensitize and distort their values, characters and personalities;

WHEREAS, street children are beyond the reach of educational institutions as most of them have dropped out from school in order to earn to survive or to supplement family income through street hawking, vending and other odd jobs, both legal and illegal;
